A hub for manufacturing

Bespoke facility case study

The design and build of an environmentally and cost-effective route-optimised facility for plasterboard manufacturer Knauf.

The businesses' raw material, gypsum, can be imported directly by sea via the adjacent deep-water berth to remove the requirement for an inland transport leg. The product is created using wind and solar power generated on the port. The finished product is then distributed utilising lower CO2 transport options; sea for the Irish market, rail and road.

This state-of-the-art facility reflects Knauf's determination to reduce the carbon emissions associated with large-scale manufacturing. The plant will also have on-site recycling as part of its commitment to the circular economy.
