Wigan's Revitalisation

Wigan is undergoing a dynamic overhaul, with the £135 million Galleries town centre revamp creating a vibrant mixed-use destination offering diverse retail, leisure, residential, and commercial spaces.

The Pier Quarter, a multi-million project by Step Places, transforming Wigan Pier into a cultural and culinary hub with office space, leisure facilities, and community amenities, targeting completion in 2024.

The Heaton Group's £180 million Eckersley Mills masterplan envisions a thriving mixed-use community with housing, businesses, and leisure facilities.

Hallgate has seen recent completions like the conversion of Victoria Mill into apartments and a £4 million Surestore facility. Additionally, the revitalization of Trencherfield Mill into a commercial and leisure hub, alongside The Edge Centre's performance and conference facilities, forms an integral part of the ongoing Pier Quarter redevelopment.

Beyond Bricks & Mortar

Wigan Pier, immortalized in George Orwell's poignant account, "The Road to Wigan Pier," is an iconic location known throughout the world with industrial heritage, literary significance, and a vibrant cultural past. Pier House, facing the pier within the Leeds/Liverpool Canal Corridor, embodies this spirit.

Formerly known as Pennyhurst Mill, Pier House stands as a testament to Wigan's rich industrial past. Built in the 1860s, it witnessed the rise and fall of several companies, including the Wigan Spinning Company, and even whispers suggest its use in sail production during the mid-20th century.

of Wigan Pier History...

Pennyhurst Mill

This imposing four-story structure, just one remnant of the larger Pennyhurst Mill complex, retains its industrial character with its distinctive three-pent roof and lower ground floor. Remarkably, it even survived a devastating fire in 1885, standing tall as a symbol of Wigan's enduring spirit.

Past Connections

While the surrounding area has transformed, Pier House retains its connection to the past. The public passage running through the building, once known as "Coffee House Backs" echoes with the footsteps of long-gone workers, serving as a reminder of the vibrant community that once thrived around the mills.

The Pier Quarter

Today, significant investment in The Pier Quarter breathes new life into this iconic location. Now is the perfect time to invest in a piece of Wigan Pier's history, contribute to its growth and regeneration, and boost your portfolio.
